 of "Keans I."

FIGURE 29.

Profile of Grand Traverse from north point of Door County peninsula to Summer Island, along line shown in black on next figure. The middle horizontal line indicates water level, and shaded areas below said line represent water in the various channels. Vertical distances are very much exaggerated in relation to horizontal distances. The altitudes and depths are obtained from contour lines on land areas and soundings of water, as shown on Michigan Exhibit 114.

FIGURE 30.
Part of Michigan Exhibit 114, to which has been added heavy black lineshowing course of profile shown in preceding figure.

FIGURE 31.

Profile across Green Bay through Chambers Island and Strawberry Island along heavy black line shown on next figure. This profile is similar to that shown in Figure 29, except that Michigan Exhibit 115, from which the data was taken, does not give contours of islands, and hence the profile of the islands is not accurate. The profile on bottom of Bay is based on soundings shown on Michigan Exhibit 115, and is approximately accurate.

FIGURE 32.

Part of Michigan Exhibit 115, on which heavy black line has been drawn to indicate course of profile shown in preceding figure.

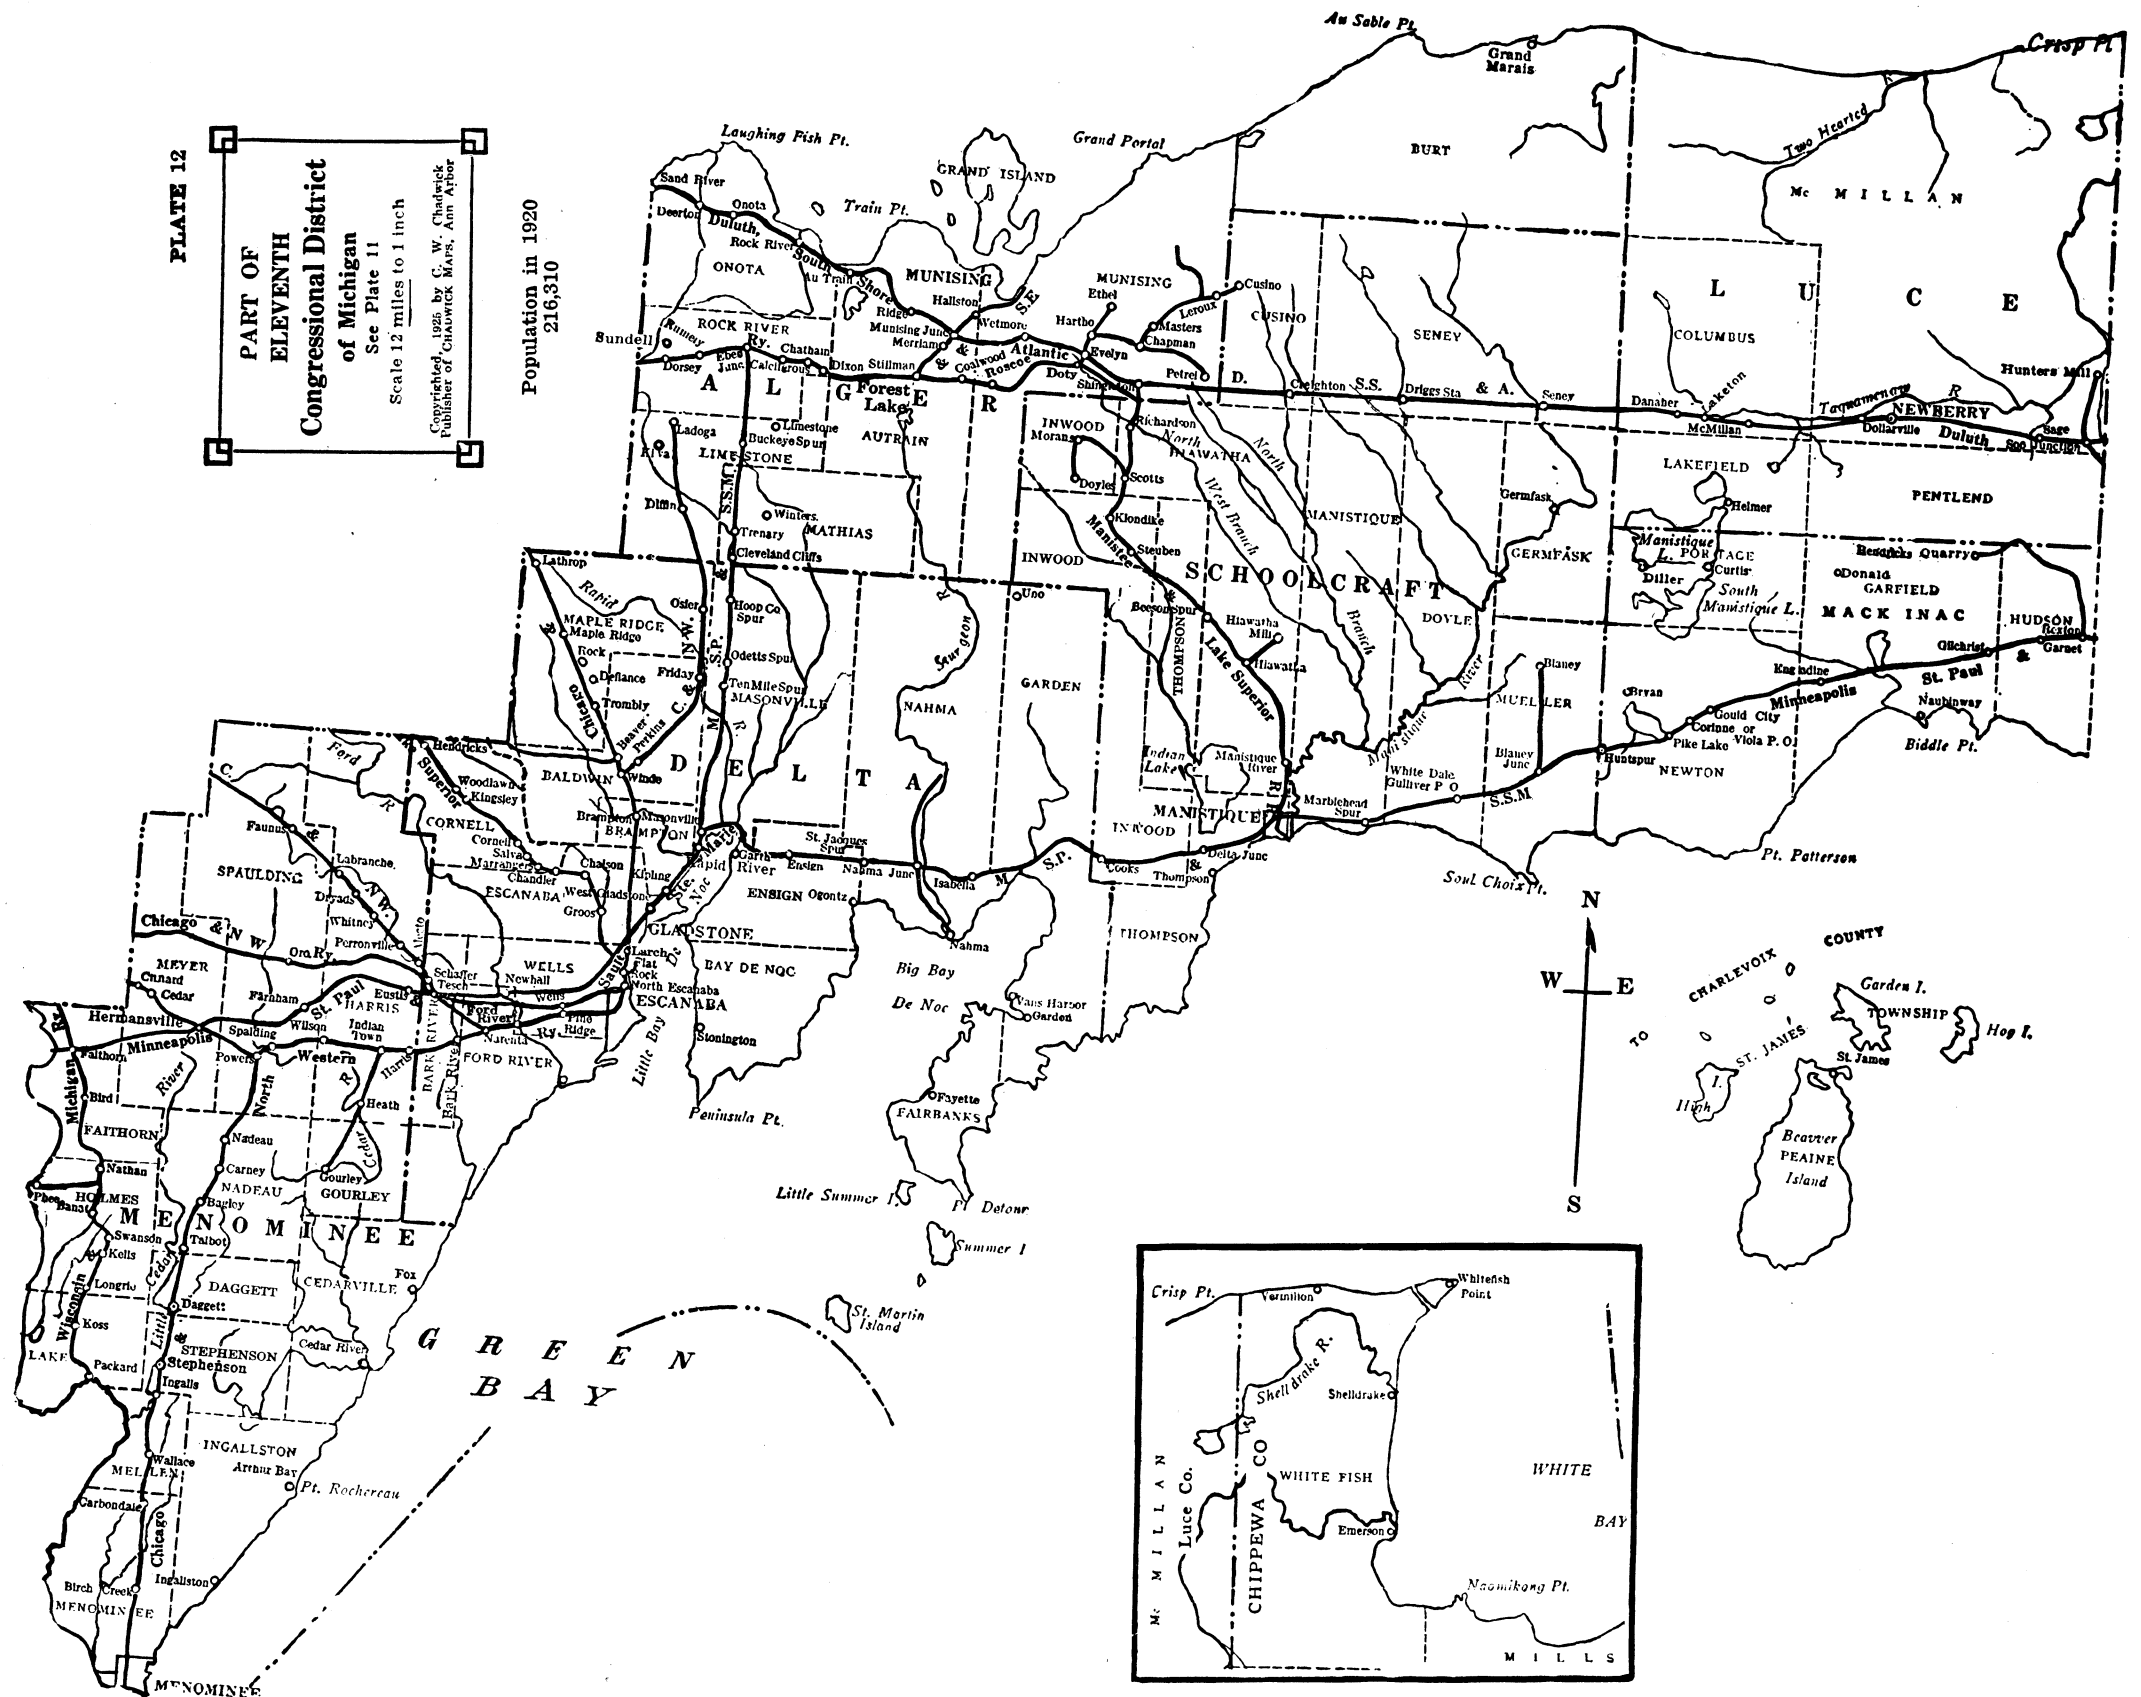

FIGURE 34.

Map of Upper Peninsula of Michigan published in 1925 by the State of Michigan in her Blue Book for that year. Note boundary passing immediately south of St. Martins Island, i. e. exactly as claimed by Wisconsin.
